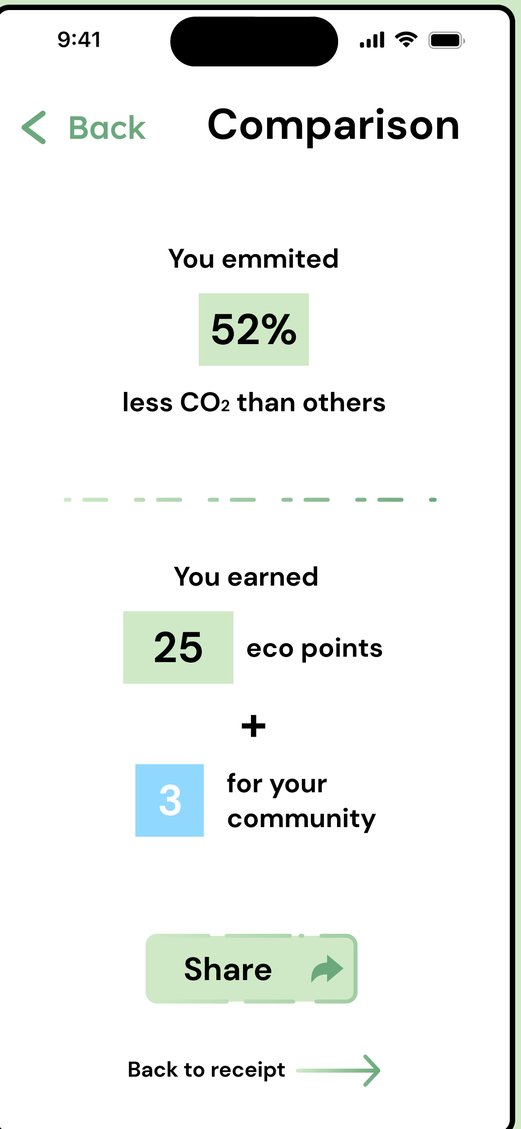
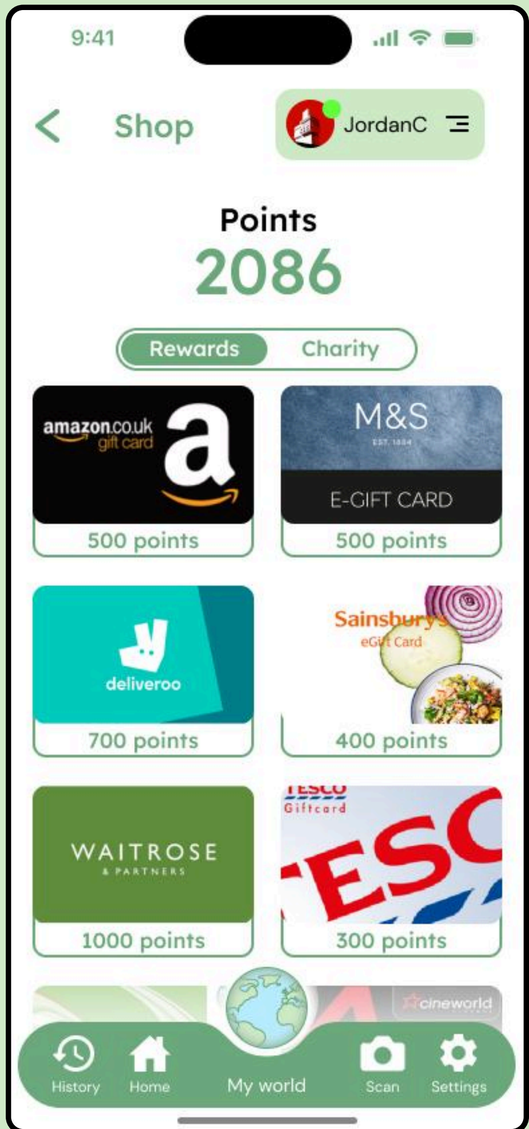
07 Rewarding good behaviour



If the user buys greener products they will be rewarded with more points. These points can then be used to redeem coupons for shops or donated to charity.


The points also gamify the process and can be used to place the user on a local, regional or international leader board. This is not only a retention tactic but also gives them a chance to feel proud in front of the other users, further incentivising greener habits.